

Key points

- Interaction design is concerned with designing interactive products to support the way people communicate and interact in their everyday and working lives
- It is concerned with how to create quality user experiences
- It requires taking into account a number of interdependent factors, including context of use, type of activities, cultural differences, and user groups
- It is multidisciplinary, involving many inputs from wide-reaching disciplines and fields